Google Android OS has become the major driving firmware on smartphones. Besides Apple, other major tech brands have opted for Android OS to power their smartphones. Google has been upgrading its mobile operating system by adding new features. Dark Mode, gesture-based navigation, and Digital Wellbeing are amongst some of the useful features added to the Android OS in recent times. Google has also integrated the Play Store application which serves as the marketplace of Android apps. If you need to install any app on your smartphone, you will need to visit the Google Play Store. The UI is well designed and you get to see the app details such as download size, ratings, and also user reviews. This helps you with deciding the authenticity of a newly launched application. The Google Play Store is a storehouse for all category of applications. From social media to lifestyle and gaming, you get numerous options to choose from. There are some 18+ apps as well which are not suitable for kids. However, by default, everyone can download any app despite the 18+ warning. If this has been your biggest concern with your child having an access to a smartphone, then you should know that there is also a provision to set a lock so that these apps can't be accessed or installed. All you need to do is set parental controls. How you can do it? Let's take a look. Steps To Set Parental Control On Google Play Store: Step 1: Go to the Google Play Store application on the respected smartphone where you want to set the parental controls. Step 2: Click on the Menu option from the top-left corner. Step 3: Now open the Settings tab. Step 4: Select the "Parental Control" option and toggle on this setting. Step 5: Once you click on the toggle tab, you will be asked to set a security pin. Enter the numeric digits which you feel won't be an easy guess for your child. Step 6: You can set filters to apps and also movies and games which are unrated. Story first published: Friday, April 2, 2021, 16:35 [IST] I don't know about your kids, but mine just love to browse the Google Play Store for new apps to download and install. It drives me crazy. They have plenty of apps and games on their devices, and yet they still want to see if there is something else out there to play. Many of the apps in the Google Play Store are not appropriate for all ages. So I like to research an app before I allow my children to install and use it. That is why I love that you can make sure your kids are only able to use apps after you manually approve them. There are even a few different ways you can accomplish this as well. I like to implement more than one so I really make sure its approved before it is used on their device Parental Controls Within the Google Play Store The first thing you can do before you hand over a new Android device to your child is turn on the parental controls within the Google Play Store. This will allow you to restrict access to various apps, movies, TV shows, music and books based on your selections. Access to change these settings will be controlled via a PIN which you can set when you turn on the controls. Just try not to pick something your kid will be able to guess quickly. To turn on the parental controls in the Google Play Store, open the store on the device and then tap the 3 lines in the top left corner of the screen. Next tap "Settings" and then "Parental controls". Turn it on by toggling the switch to the On position. Tap each area to set restrictions for that particular item. Use Google Play Family Link If your child is under 13 you can set up Google's Family Link as well. When you set up your child's device through FamilyLink it allows you some controls over the device including time limits, content filters, and Google Play. Setup for FamilyLink is a little bit more complicated, though, and does require you to create a Google account for your child. Since children under 13 aren't allowed regular Google Accounts, this is a great way to get them their own environment while they are still learning. When you download FamilyLink on your child's device, it will walk you through the setup. Once it is installed on your child's device and your own device, you will be able to control their installs from your phone. If you turn on the setting, your child will not be able to install any apps until you approve them from your own phone, or you can enter your Google password in their device to unlock it right away. Use a parental control app like Boomerang You might think that using Boomerang in conjunction with FamilyLink is pointless, but I actually use both on my children's devices. When my son wants to install a new app, I have to approve it through FamilyLink, and then go into Boomerang and allow its use. I am all about layers of security. Once you have Boomerang set up on your child's device you can prevent them from using newly installed apps. Tap your child's device on the main Boomerang screen in the parent's device. Open "control installed apps" under the Managed Apps area Select "app groups" from the manage apps screen Tap the toggle switch next to "Newly Installed Apps" until it becomes colored Once this is set, you will get a notification when your child installs a new app. You can approve or deny right from this notification to make it super simple. I know when I hear stories about parents who had no idea their child was even using a particular app like Snapchat, I cringe! Turning these settings on is a very simple way to keep your kids safe! When you put parental controls on an Android device, you can restrict what content can be downloaded or purchased from Google Play on that device based on maturity level. Set up parental controls Important: Parental controls don't prevent restricted content as a search result or through a direct link. For family members who manage their own accounts Parental controls only apply to the Android device, you added them on. To put parental controls on another device, repeat the steps below on the other devices. If you have multiple users on a device, you can set up different parental controls for each person. The person who sets up parental controls will create a PIN that needs to be entered to remove or change the parental controls. Open the Google Play app. At the top right, tap the profile icon. Tap Settings Family Parental controls. Turn on Parental controls. To protect parental controls, create a PIN your child doesn't know. Select the type of content you want to filter. Choose how to filter or restrict access. For family members whose accounts are managed with Family Link If your child's Google Account is managed with Family Link, you can set up parental controls for them. How Google Play parental controls work Parental controls work on Android devices where your child is signed in to their Google Account. A parent in the family group needs to use their Google Account password to set up or change their child's parental control settings. Set up parental controls Open the Family Link app. Select your child. Tap Manage settings Google Play. Tap the type of content you want to filter. Choose how to filter or restrict access. Tip: You can also manage your child's account when you click on your child's name at g.co/YourFamily. Fix possible parental control issues If you have issues with your PIN, updates, or incorrect ratings show on your device, explore these options: I forgot my PIN Important: To reset your PIN, you have to clear your Play Store app settings. Before you follow these steps, you should note all your existing settings so you can set them up again. If you forgot the PIN that you created when you set up parental controls, follow the instructions below to reset it. On your device, open the Settings app. Tap Apps & notifications. Tap Google Play Store. Tap Storage Clear data or Clear storage. This will reset your parental controls and your PIN. When you go back into the Play Store app and add parental controls, you'll be able to set a new PIN. My app or game won't open If you've set up parental controls for apps and games and one of your apps isn't updating, it may be because the new version of the app has a higher rating than the version you have on your device. If the new version of the app has a higher rating than your parental controls allow, you won't be prompted to update the app. To get the app to update, you need to change your parental control settings to allow a higher rating. Tip: You can turn off parental controls to update the app, then turn parental controls on again. Content on my child's device is outside the rating I set You or your child will still be able to see any apps and games you downloaded before you added parental controls, even if they're outside of the rating you set. If your child's account is supervised with Family Link, you can block these apps on their Android devices. How parental controls work You can set up parental controls for apps, games, and other digital content. Read the sections below to learn how parental controls work within each type of content. Tip: Parental controls for each type of content aren't available in every country. If you travel to a country where they aren't available, they might not work until you get back home. Set up parental controls for Apps & Games You can restrict apps and games on an Android device by using parental controls, which lets you choose the highest content rating you want to allow for downloads or purchases. However, you may still be able to see apps and games outside of your filter when you search, or by visiting them using a direct link to the app's page. How parental controls for games work in Play Games Parental controls don't change the games you see in the Play Games app, including games you've bought or recommended games. If you try to install a game using the Play Games app, you'll be taken to the Play Store app where your parental controls settings may restrict access. Tip: You or your child will still be able to view any apps and games you downloaded before you added parental controls, even if they're outside of the rating you set. If your child's account is supervised with Family Link, you can restrict movies on an Android device by using parental controls, which lets you choose the highest rating you want to allow for rental, purchase, or playback. However, you may still be able to see TV shows outside of our filter when you search, or by visiting them using a direct link to the content's page. If movies are restricted because of parental controls, you won't see them in the Play Store app or in the Play Movies app, even if you've already rented or purchased them. You can turn parental controls off to view these movies again. Set up parental controls for TV You can restrict TV shows on an Android device by using parental controls, which lets you choose the highest rating you want to allow for purchase or playback. However, you may still be able to see TV shows outside of our filter when you search, or by visiting them using a direct link to the content's page. If TV shows are restricted because of parental controls, you won't see them on the Play Store app or in the Play Movies & TV app, even if you've already purchased them. You can turn Parental controls off to see these shows again.

Set up parental controls for Books When you set up parental controls for books, you won't be able to read or purchase most sexually explicit books from the Play Store app and the Play Books app. However, you may still be able to see books outside of our filter when you search, or by visiting them using a direct link to the content's page. You can turn parental controls off to see these books again. While setting up parental controls won't catch 100% of sexually explicit books in Google Play, it should help you avoid most adult content.
